Charles Glenn

Charles Glenn is an entertainer who draws upon his vast wealth of knowledge and training to create unforgettable musical experiences for his audiences.

The son of an accomplished opera singer, Charles received early training in voice and percussion. Charles has utilized both his strong vocal and percussion talents as the opening act for such national groups as Smokey Robinson, Huey Lewis and the News, and the Allman Brothers.

Charles has also performed and worked with Andre Crouch and Stellar Award winner Calvin Bridges, and was selected to perform a series of limited engagements with Grammy Award-winning group "The Fifth Dimension".

He has had the opportunity to perform during gala grand openings for casinos in Kansas City and Las Vegas. His unique style and high-spirited performances have been a highlight of many conferences and retreats for major corporations and organizations. In addition, Charles was selected by Don King Promotions to sing the National Anthem for both nationally televised Corey Spinks fights.

This local Emmy Award winner also had the distinct honor of singing the National Anthem for the St. Louis Rams, St. Louis Cardinals and has been the anthem singer for the St. Louis Blues for over 10 years. One of Charles' most memorable moments was singing the National Anthem and "God Bless America" for the St. Louis Rams versus the New York Giants football game two weeks after September 11, 2001.

Charles is also a frequent teacher and performer at gospel workshops in Hamburg and Ahrenburg, Germany. He is an active volunteer and contributor to local schools' music and performing arts Programs through his performances with the Local 2-197 Musicians Union Orchestra. Blues. One of Charles' most memorable moments was singing the National Anthem and "God Bless America" for the St. Louis Rams versus the New York Giants football game two weeks after September 11, 2001.

Charles was also a prizewinner on NBC's "The Winner Is" inaugural season.
